

HOW TO PREVENT CATS FROM SCRATCHING IN UNDESIRABLE AREAS

Help! My Cat is Scratching:

It is important to note that scratching is normal cat behaviour, serving to groom the front claws and leave markers of the cat's presence. Cats may also scratch to stretch their muscles.

Tips on Training your Cat where to Scratch:

Proper training to scratch on appropriate surfaces, combined with nail care, can prevent damage in the home. The following information is pertinent in choosing a scratching post:

- Many cats prefer vertical scratching posts; others prefer horizontal ones.
- Vertical scratching posts must be sturdy and preferably tall enough for the cat to have a good stretch.
- Scratching materials preferred by most cats are wood, sisal rope and rough fabric
- Locate scratching posts near areas favoured by cats, such as windows or sleeping areas since cats often stretch and scratch upon awakening.
- Start training your new kitten or cat to use scratching posts when first introduced to your home.
- Cats return to favourite or chosen scratching sites, so motivate them to use the scratching post you select and avoid letting them use the furniture.
- Entice your cat to the post upon awakening, rubbing catnip on the post, and holding treats or toys partway up the post to encourage stretching and scratching.
- You can secure an appealing toy, such as feathers, at the top of the post.
- Rewards, such as treats, can be given at each step; as the cat approaches the post, touches it, and finally scratches it.
- Never yell at or punish the cat.

My Cat is already Scratching Undesirable Areas:

- If your cat already scratches in an undesirable area, talk to your veterinarian or a veterinary staff member.
- The veterinary staff will help determine your cat's likely preferences; for a vertical versus horizontal scratching post, for the type of material that will draw the cat to the post, and for the location of the post.
- You can then make or purchase the most appropriate post.
- Place double-sided sticky tape on inappropriate scratching areas and reward use of the post. This will help direct the cat to the post.
- If necessary, the cat can be confined to an area when the scratching post is the only available scratching outlet. This establishes use of the scratching post and prevents inadvertent reinforcement for scratching off limits household items.

Routine Grooming is Important:

- Trim the nails every one to two weeks.

- If done correctly, this procedure is well accepted by most cats.
- Introduce nail trimming as part of the routine handling to kittens.
- Plastic nail caps, applied every 4-6 weeks, are an option for cats that are easy to handle.
- After trimming nails, fill a nail cap about a third of the way with adhesive, and fit the cap over the trimmed nail.
- The soft plastic nail cap covers prevent furniture damage when the cat scratches

Should I Declaw My Cat?

Declawing remains controversial but it will stop furniture destruction. For more information regarding declawing your cat, consult your veterinarian. Both the American Association of Feline Practitioners and the American Veterinary Medical Association promote training to use the scratching post and discourage declawing as a surgical procedure. You can read their position statements and acquired additional information at their websites.

www.aafponline.org/positionstate.htm and www.avma.org/onlnews/javma/apr03/030415c.asp

(The above information is from the American Association of Feline Practitioners)